

Milan design week

'Loulou Rock' chair, Gallotti & Radice

One of a trio of pieces to be unveiled by the brand, this design by David/Nicolas is, say the design duo, 'a reflection on our cultural heritage and family traditions, taking inspiration from our grandmothers and the eternal presence of rocking chairs in Lebanese homes'. Its matte-black painted-metal frame and brass or stainless-steel details lend it an heirloom quality. Salone del Mobile, Hall 9, Stands E11-F10, gallottiradice.it

'Joan' sofa, Poliform

Fashion is increasingly stepping into the design sphere, but it has always had a significant influence on furniture. For the upholstery on this customisable piece, Jean-Marie Massaud looked to the intricately stitched details of couture, with the sofa's balanced proportions making it a great fit for well-dressed homes. Salone del Mobile, Hall 9, Stands A05-C12, poliform.it

'Kenobi' table, Turri

A redesign of this brand's flagship showroom promises to be completed in time for design week, and those visiting the refreshed space should make a beeline to see this new piece by Italian architect Marco Acerbis in person. Its legs, which attach to the circular top with metallic joints, are worthy of closer attention. Via Borgospesso 11, turri.it ➤

'Teapots', Loewe

Milan may be the land of the espresso, but for Loewe it's time for tea. At Palazzo Citterio, it is presenting one-off teapots by 26 designers, including the likes of Naoto Fukasawa (a petal-covered beauty) and David Chipperfield ('Blue Teapot', pictured), with tea-tasting sessions (booking required) organised in collaboration with Postcard Teas. A pick-me-up in every sense of the word. Via Brera 12, loewe.com
