1. 'LÁMINA 85' LAMP
by Antoni Arola,
for Santa & Cole

Spanish designer Antoni Arola has been dubbed 'the Poet of Light', and his new collaboration with lighting manufacturer Santa & Cole certainly helps cement this reputation. His 'Lámina' system is a portfolio of lamps that are all variations on one slender, discreet form, where light is reflected by the metal shade. The lamps can be used alone – offering diffused lighting – or in a composition of multiples for more general lighting in any space. We particularly like a single 'Lámina' lamp as dining illumination – subtle enough to cast us in the best light. £790, santacole.com

2. 'TAMA' VITRINE
by Carlo Colombo,
for Gallotti & Radice

Carlo Colombo's designs combine simplicity with elegance, and his sideboard for Gallotti & Radice is no exception. Finely crafted by the Italian company in black open-pore lacquered ash, with details in satin brass, warm grey glass shelves and glass panels, the 'Tama' vitrine is an exercise in sophistication. Equipped with a rhomboid-engraved mirrored interior and LED lighting, it is a functional and beautiful addition to any dining room. £9,490, gallottiradice.it

3. 'ANDROGYNE' DINING TABLE
by Danielle Siggerud, for Menu

This monumental dining table is the work of Copenhagen-based architect Danielle Siggerud and furniture company Menu. Conceived by Siggerud as a series of sculptures, the Androgyne collection also includes a lounge table and a side table, each with a simple but striking silhouette. The dining version features a natural or dark-stained oak base with a round Kunis Breccia stone top. Siggerud says her design strikes a 'balance of both masculine and feminine strengths'. From DDK22,995 (€3,050), menuspace.com

4. 'SHELLEY DINING LITTLE ARMCHAIR'
by GamFratesi, for Minotti

Danish-Italian design duo GamFratesi team up with Minotti once again on a new piece to join the 'Shelley' family of armchairs. The compact new chair features a cubic silhouette contained within a saddle-hide shell and perched on a slim metal base in a black-nickel finish. Comfort is at the heart of this design, with a padded seat, back and armrests making the 'Shelley' a perfect dining companion. There's an array of options for the fabric upholstery and the saddle hide, including the new shades of ash, sage, bordeaux and dove grey. £5,165, minotti.com
